Study abroad in Italy

STUDY ABROAD IN ITALY

Gustolab International (GLi) and Borromini Institute offer study & intern abroad programs in Italy during the spring, summer, and fall. The Spring Food Culture & Food Media in Italy program runs from January to May and is a unique interdisciplinary program. Courses focus on the critical study of culture, systems and politics of food in Italy. Participants will study the food culture of Italy, food media and communications, architecture of ancient Rome, art history, social dynamics, economy, and the language and culture of Italy. In the Fall, our typical program “Food in Italy: Sustainable Markets, Products & processes” usually runs from September to December in Rome. This program will assist students in understanding sustainable food supply chains in Italy through the study of its markets, products and processes. Our summer program runs for 8 weeks from May to July and focuses on Sustainable Business & Social Practices.

In all our programs, the integration of coursework, fieldwork, and projects affords participants a unique perspective for engaging Italy. This engagement is driven by personal experience in markets, neighborhoods, and rural areas as well as reflection on important and timely academic issues.

Our course catalog includes courses from our 4 clusters as well as academic internships in Rome or other cities or towns in Italy. In addition, we offer Italian language courses in collaboration with the Scuola Leonardo da Vinci Rome. We accept applications from university students (both undergraduate and graduate) from all fields of study. Scholars, researchers & professionals are also encouraged to inquire. Moreover, individualized courses of study can be arranged for those with special curricular interests or needs.

The Gustolab experience is unique and unlike other study abroad experiences I learned the value of Italian culture and being immersed into a new environment I've come more independent and stronger.

covid-19, safety & wellness

We, along with many other American universities, have successfully conducted Fall 2021 programming in Italy. This shows that with the necessary precautions and procedures in place, it is possible to create an optimal environment for onsite programming. Therefore, our plan is to provide onsite programming in the environs of Rome with excursions, lectures, and guest speakers. If for whatever reason, the ‘on-site’ version of the course is canceled, we will shift to the virtual version of courses that will be offered ‘at a distance’ from Rome or Italy. We successfully did this in the spring of 2020. Learn more about our Covid-19 protocols.
